

ABOUT THE SPORT ETHICS DEBATE

The annual Sport Ethics Debate is now in its 12th year! Each year since its inception, approximately 20 graduate students enroll in Dr. Mullane's "Ethical Decision Making in Sport and the Professions" (KIN 606) class, work in teams throughout the fall semester, conduct research on the five cases assigned, and compete against each other in December. Over the past twelve years, more than 250 graduate students will have participated in this debate, and they continue to highlight it as one of their best and most meaningful experiences in graduate school. We continue our successful fundraising through the School of Education and Human Development. With the help of the Division of Continuing and International Education, we have expanded the opportunities for our online graduate students to participate virtually and have increased the use of social media for additional access and participation. This year the debate grew to reach our Sport Administration Undergraduate Students with the Sport Ethics Sit-Down panel discussion.
